

STEPHEN ONGPIN FINE ART

Isaac de MOUCHERON (Amsterdam 1667 - Amsterdam 1744)

Landscape with Hunters Near a Terrace with Dead Game

Gouache.

Signed I. Moucheron / Fecit at the lower right.

188 x 296 mm. (7 3/8 x 11 5/8 in.)

This is a particularly fine example of the type of highly finished watercolour or gouache landscapes by Isaac de Moucheron that were highly praised by his contemporaries. As the 18th century biographer Johan van Gool noted of Moucheron, his 'absolutely exquisite ('overheerlyke') drawings and watercolours are as esteemed and sought after as his paintings and pursued enthusiastically by connoisseurs.' A comparable subject is found in a watercolour by Moucheron of The Edge of a Forest with Riders and Dead Game, formerly in the Goll von Franckenstein and Klaver collections and sold at auction in Amsterdam in 1994. As Wedde has pointed out, the dead hare at the lower right of the present composition is repeated in the centre foreground of the ex-Klaver watercolour.

The first owner of this drawing was Jean Lucas van der Dussen (1724-1773), who bought the Kasteel Groeneveld in Baarn, near Hilversum in the province of Utrecht, in 1755, later renovating and expanding the property significantly. The posthumous sale of his art collection at auction in 1774 included over 750 drawings, together with 37 paintings and more than 5,600 prints.

Artist description:

A painter, draughtsman and etcher, Isaac de Moucheron was the son and pupil of the landscape painter Frederick de Moucheron. While both father and son depicted much the same type of Italianate views, as the scholar Leo van Puyvelde noted of Isaac, 'his work may be distinguished from that of his father by its loftier spirit and finer execution.' Isaac de Moucheron was in Italy between 1695 and 1697, and on his return to Holland developed a successful career as a painter of large, decorative wall paintings for houses in Amsterdam. He made a particular speciality of Italianate landscapes, classical or Arcadian views and scenes of imaginary parks and formal gardens. In many of these decorative projects for private homes he worked in collaboration with the figure painter Jacob de Wit, while towards the end of the 1730s he also began to design the façades of buildings. Moucheron also painted a number of cabinet pictures of views of Roman and Italianate landscapes indebted to the examples of Claude and Gaspard Dughet. His success as an artist, and the popularity of his drawings and mural decorations, earned him an annual income of around 1,500 guilders.

In her catalogue raisonné of Isaac de Moucheron's works, published in 1996, Nina Wedde noted of the artist that 'The personal encounter with the Italian landscape and especially with the art of Gaspard Dughet radically changed his conception. In park landscapes Isaac also begins by discreetly introducing courtly elements in hunt scenes before turning his interest to formal garden layouts of a much more monumental nature, incorporating elements from Antiquity and from contemporary examples of design, people them with figures in tunics.' As she further notes of Moucheron's compositions, 'The setting was further enhanced by the omnipresent tall, decorative trees with their finely detailed leafage ranging in the watercolours from the light ochre of the foreground to the deep green and blue tones of the distance. The backgrounds showed vistas over Southern harbours with shipping on the water and towerlike buildings on the rocky coastlines or of mountainous landscapes rising above undulating hills. The low-set horizon left ample space for a sky dappled with white clouds where birds smoothly sailed. Figures attired in classical dress animated the scenes. They are engaged in leisurely activities...Dogs are ever present companions while peacocks grace a few balustrades.'

As Wedde has also written of the artist, 'The most complete and constant record of Isaac's activity as an artist is preserved in the works on paper and his stature as a draughtsman of merit has seldom been contested.' Moucheron produced finished drawings both in watercolour and in pen and ink; works which were much in demand by collectors. Subjects depicted include topographical views, Arcadian landscapes, scenes in the manner of earlier Dutch artists such as Nicolaes Berchem and, in particular, fantasy views of parks and gardens, known as 'hofgezichten'. At the time of Moucheron's death some five hundred drawings remained in his studio and were dispersed at auction in December 1744, while many more must have been sold to collectors in his lifetime. Around four hundred drawings by the artist survive today, although only relatively few of these are signed or dated.
